

Shape the future of HR

For the past 30 years, the Human Resource Competency Study (HRCS) has identified crucial abilities for HR professionals and high-performing leaders. Round 8 of this study seeks to answer the questions: "How can you as an HR professional stand out in your business?" "How does the maturity and sophistication of the HR department impact business performance?" "What competencies are most important for your professional development?" and "How do business build capabilities?"

The RBL Group and the Michigan Ross School of Business invite you to participate.

No cost for participating companies*

Individual and company reports with benchmark data

Individuals learn to boost business performance

Companies learn to better implement business strategies

There will be opportunities to attend regional feedback sessions.

The study will be available mid-September through mid-December 2020.

Contact us now to participate.

 visit: rbl.net/hrcs-round-8  email: hrcs@rbl.net

*No cost for up to 50 participants. A nominal fee will be charged for additional participants. Please let us know if you are considering a large number of participants.